

Fauci Pleads the Fifth

The Wizened Virus Master was wrong about everything

BY STEVEN W. MOSHER

Despite being pardoned by President Biden for his Covid crimes, Anthony Fauci today pled his 5th Amendment right to remain silent.

He refused to answer a single question about his role in pandemic policy before the Homeland Security Committee, chaired by Senator Rand Paul, despite being immune from prosecution.

I think I know why.

Fauci was wrong about everything. From the lab origin of COVID-19 to the China travel ban, from the downplaying of hydroxychloroquine to foolish mandatory face masks, from social distancing to punishing lockdowns, his “legacy” is one misstep after another.

His authoritarian edicts made things worse, much worse, for Americans than they otherwise would have been.

Fauci had initially dismissed the Wuhan virus in January radio interviews as “a very, very low risk to the United States.” So it might have been, except for the incredible series of wrong calls that Fauci made in the months following.

These began early in 2020, when President Trump wanted to impose a travel ban. Dr. Fauci vigorously objected to the move, insisting that

(continued on page 4)

- 2 Without USAID, the Ibero-American Left Lost Control of the Board
- 5 What Christ Suffered
- 7 Malta Resists: A Pro-Life Victory That Strengthens the Last European Bastion in Defense of Life

- 9 Ultrasound Machine Revitalizes Catholic Mission Hospital
- 11 From the Countries
- 12 PRI in the News

Without USAID, the Ibero-American Left is in Retreat

BY CARLOS POLO, DIRECTOR, PRI IBERO-AMERICA

Editor's Note: The closure of USAID, and the rebirth of democracy—and pro-life policies—in Latin America are closely related. And our work at PRI played a key role. Carlos Polo explains:

Seven elections. Seven defeats for the Left. Seven signs pointing in the same direction.

Since the Trump administration began the operational dismantling of USAID, the Ibero-American Left has lost in Chile, Bolivia, Ecuador, Honduras, Costa Rica, Peru, and Colombia. In Chile, José Antonio Kast won; in Bolivia, Rodrigo Paz; in Ecuador, Daniel Noboa; in Honduras, Tito Asfura; in Costa Rica, Laura Fernández; in Peru, Keiko Fujimori; and in Colombia, Abelardo de la Espriella.

This is not a coincidence. Nor does it mean that USAID was the only explanation for all of these results. Elections respond to many factors: insecurity, inflation, government fatigue, corruption, specific leadership, and campaign mistakes. But when seven electoral processes point in the same direction after one of the principal sources of international funding for progressivism was cut off, any serious analyst should examine the phenomenon carefully.

For years, the Ibero-American Left played with an advantage. Behind it stood an extensive network of foreign cooperation that financed, legitimized, and professionalized much of its cultural agenda. USAID was the central piece of that network.

This is the part many prefer not to discuss. The so-called “social agenda” of the Left did not advance because of popular conviction. It advanced because it had money, consultants, NGOs, reports, training programs, campaigns, diplomatic pressure, and technical experts embedded in ministries, courts, municipalities, universities, and public agencies.

Under friendly words such as development, inclusion, rights, sustainability, or cooperation, very specific policies were promoted: abortion, gender ideology, LGBTQ activism, radical feminism, ideological environmentalism, migration managed by international organizations, and “sexual and reproductive health” programs disconnected from the real priorities of the people.

The mechanism was effective. First, these policies were financed from abroad. Then they were presented as technical standards. Afterwards they entered national plans, school curricula, health protocols, labor policies, judicial guidelines, and social programs. Finally, they became permanent public expenditures.

In other words, what began as an imported agenda ended up being paid for by the national taxpayers themselves.

Meanwhile, the real needs of the population lay elsewhere. People wanted better nutrition, decent employment, basic healthcare, real education, housing, public safety, and a determined fight against corruption. But many times they received something else.

While the population demanded hospitals, medicines, and primary healthcare, USAID and its allies offered “sexual and reproductive health.”

The Population Research Institute Review is published bimonthly by:

Population Research Institute

109 East Main St.
Front Royal VA 22630
(540)-622-5240
pri@pop.org
www.pop.org

Fr. Paul Marx, OSB, PhD
(1920-2010)
Founder

Steven W. Mosher
President

Thomas Mosher
Director of Administration

Carlos Polo
Director, PRI Latin American Office

Carlos Beltramo
Director, PRI European Office

Chiara McKenna
New Media Specialist

Design by Perceptions Design Studio
Amherst, New Hampshire

While children needed to be fed and to learn to read, write, and reason, they were offered so-called “comprehensive sexuality education” based on the concept of self-perceived “gender.” While millions of Ibero-Americans had to emigrate because of the lack of employment and leave their families behind, labor policies focused on LGBTQ non-discrimination were promoted. While neighborhoods demanded security, they were told about “intersectional approaches.” While families asked for stability, they were offered “deconstruction.”

This disconnect between the funded agenda and lived reality explains part of the public’s fatigue. The Left did not lose only because it governed poorly. It lost because it stopped listening to the people. It believed that the people should adapt to its ideological categories, when in reality politics exists to respond to the concrete lives of individuals.

That is why these seven defeats are not an accident. They are the symptom of a deeper rupture. Without the same flow of resources, without the same international network operating comfortably, and without the same ability to impose cultural frameworks through cooperation agencies, many progressive causes have lost momentum and influence at the ballot box.

They had funding, but not always roots. They had technical language, but not always the people. They had international allies, but not always social legitimacy.

Here lies the great conservative opportunity.

But it is not enough to celebrate that the Left is retreating. The right

Getty Images/Sadeugra

“ The Left did not lost only because it governed poorly. It lost because it stopped listening to the people. It believed people should adapt to its ideological categories has won elections before and has also disappointed. Conservatism cannot limit itself to being an emotional reaction against progressivism. It must become a serious proposal for national reconstruction.

The first pillar must be the rule of law. Without law there is no freedom. Without independent judges there is no justice. Without legal certainty there is no investment. Without strong institutions, politics becomes spoils. Conservative governments must demonstrate that order is not abuse but the basic condition that allows a family to live, work, educate its children, and plan for the future.

The second pillar must be the market economy. Ibero-America does not need more gigantic states promising endless rights while producing real poverty. It needs investment, private property, formal employment, fewer obstacles, monetary stability, and respect for entrepreneurs. But the market must be linked to real social mobility. Economic freedom will only be politically sustainable if it improves the lives of ordinary people.

(continued on page 6)

Fauci Pleads the Fifth, continued

“travel bans don’t work.”¹ And so planes from China carrying infected passengers continued to land in New York and other American cities.

As Covid began its predictable spread in the U.S., Fauci was suddenly everywhere on the airwaves warning about how contagious and even lethal the coronavirus was.

In March 2020, panicked by a pandemic model from the UK that predicted a viral apocalypse, he recommended that the entire country be shut down indefinitely.² He backed a shelter-in-place order for New York City and the closure of schools and “nonessential” small businesses.

These moves denied tens of millions of children an education, put roughly 40 million people out of work, and nearly bankrupted the U.S. economy.

The model that Fauci relied upon turned out to be algorithmic garbage, but that didn’t stop America’s most famous virologist from committing every epidemiological sin in the book.

There were two inexpensive and widely available drugs available to treat those with Covid – hydroxychloroquine and ivermectin. Fauci dismissed both in favor of a mad rush to develop a new vaccine, a delay in treatment which necessarily cost lives.

There was early evidence from geriatric Italy that, while Covid merely gave the young the sniffles, it could be deadly to the elderly. This was shockingly confirmed by New York City’s long-term-care centers, whose residents were carted out in coffins by the thousands.

But instead of protecting the vulnerable elderly, as experts like Scott Atlas recommended, Fauci publicly attacked their ideas as “nonsense and very dangerous.”³ His solution – a scattershot effort to vaccinate every man, woman and child in America – cost the lives of countless elderly whose lives could have been saved if they had been given priority.⁴

It was clear from the outset that the risk of children dying from COVID-19 was effectively zero, far lower than their risk of dying from the seasonal flu, which itself is tiny. Yet by early March 2020 Fauci was loudly calling for nationwide school closures.⁵

Closing America’s schools did not save lives. But it did have a destructive effect on the academic performance and the emotional health of children. Many children suffered severe learning losses as they went a year with virtually no schooling or social interaction at all.⁶

Throughout the last half of 2020 and 2021 Fauci ignored, dismissed, even ridiculed the idea that those like myself who had recovered from COVID-19 had acquired natural immunity.

Of course, medical practitioners have known about natural immunity since at least the time of the Antonine Plague in Ancient Rome in 165 AD. And everyone who’s had high school biology knows that, if you’ve recovered from a viral infection, your body has likely built a defense against it. Everyone, that is, except Fauci.

Fauci’s “original pandemic sin,” of course, was funding Chinese labs. The long-time head of the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Disease was the chief cheerleader and funder of “gain of function” research — the dangerous idea that deadly viruses could be created and studied in the lab to help prevent the next pandemic.

Had the head of the Wuhan Institute of Virology, Dr. Shi Zhengli, not been taught these techniques in Fauci-funded labs, she wouldn’t have been able to create coronaviruses in her lab. And the world might have been spared the Covid pandemic.

Whether Fauci inadvertently helped to create Covid or not, once it had emerged from the Wuhan, he made a bad situation much, much worse.

The truth is, Fauci couldn’t have caused any more unnecessary suffering and death in America if he had tried to.

No wonder he doesn’t want to answer any questions.

¹ <https://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2026/jul/28/fauci-diary-tells-story-institutional-cover/>

² <https://www.nationalreview.com/corner/professor-lockdown-modeler-resigns-in-disgrace/>

³ <https://www.cnn.com/2020/10/15/dr-fauci-says-letting-the-coronavirus-spread-to-achieve-herd-immunity-is-nonsense-and-dangerous.html>

⁴ <https://www.wsj.com/articles/how-to-end-lockdowns-next-month-11608230214?page=1>

⁵ <https://dossier.substack.com/p/dr-flip-flop-a-timeline-of-faucis>

⁶ <https://nypost.com/2021/02/08/lockdowns-are-breaking-our-kids-and-the-damage-may-be-permanent/>

PRI'S SPECIAL GIFT TO YOU . . .

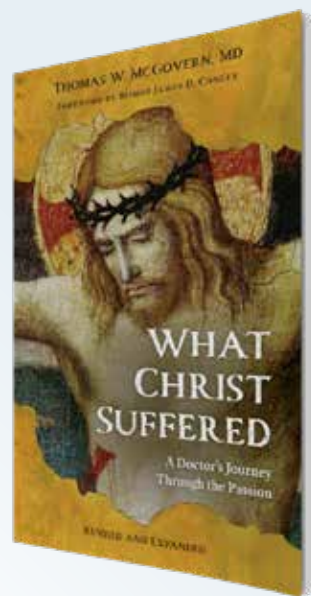

What Christ Suffered: A Doctor's Journey Through the Passion

What Christ suffered during his Passion — for you — is a powerful source of reflection and meditation.

While we know Jesus was crucified in Jerusalem around AD 33, the details have been confused and obscured over the past two millennia. In this revised and expanded edition of What Christ Suffered, Dr. Thomas W. McGovern provides the most accurate, up-to-date understanding of the sufferings of Jesus Christ, using ancient Greek and Latin literature about crucifixion, discoveries of ancient images, archaeology, medical reenactment studies, and medical case reports. In addition, drawing on the teachings of Pope Saint John Paul II in Salvifici Doloris, this book offers practical ways to respond to suffering, both our own and that of others.

This medical investigation of the Passion allows readers to enter more fully than ever into the reality of what Jesus suffered for our redemption. His Passion really comes alive and has the potential to heal us when we come to know him more deeply in our own sufferings. By his sacrificial death on the cross, Jesus has won salvation for the whole world, redeeming even our sufferings through his incredible act of love.

PLEASE USE THE ENCLOSED
GIFT REPLY TO REQUEST YOUR COPY OF...

What Christ Suffered: A Doctor's Journey Through the Passion

GIFTS TO PRI ARE TAX DEDUCTIBLE. GIVE TODAY!

SCAN TO GIVE ONLINE!

Getty Images/Ceri Breeze

The third pillar must be an uncompromising fight against corruption. There can be no half measures here. Corruption destroys roads, hospitals, and schools, but it also destroys something deeper: trust. When citizens believe everyone steals, they stop believing in the law. When they stop believing in the law, they seek strongmen. And when they seek strongmen, the republic begins to fall ill.

The fourth pillar must be the defense of the family and of life—not as rhetorical decoration, but as the center of a truly humane public policy. The family is the first network of social protection. Human life is the first right. A nation that despises life, weakens motherhood, relativizes the education of children, and reduces sexuality to consumption cannot build sustainable development.

The seven elections lost by the Left since the operational closure of USAID show that the board has changed. The international infrastructure that for years sustained much of the progressive agenda no longer operates with the same strength. And when external funding declines, what many citizens had been saying quietly becomes much clearer: our priorities are different. People do not want ideology before bread. They do not want gender before school. They do not want activism before security. They do not want international cooperation used as a Trojan horse to impose policies that were never voted on.

Without USAID, the Ibero-American Left is in retreat. History has opened a window. The question is whether Ibero-American conservatism will have the maturity to pass through it.

Malta Resists: A Pro-Life Victory That Strengthens the Last European Bastion in Defense of Life

BY DR. CARLOS BELTRAMO, DIRECTOR, PRI EUROPE

While much of Europe continues advancing toward a progressive normalization of abortion as a supposed “human right,” in recent weeks a new sign of hope has appeared. Those who defend the dignity of every human life from conception on this continent are buoyed by the news from Malta, where the Constitutional Court has stood strong for Life.

Catholic Malta is the only country of the European Union where abortion remains illegal in practically all circumstances. Thus, it has long been targeted by the abortion movement.

The latest attack, strangely enough, came from a U.S. citizen named Andrea Prudente. While she was on vacation in Malta in 2022, she suffered a hemorrhage when she was 14 weeks pregnant. She wanted to terminate the pregnancy, but the doctors at Mater Dei refused. They had detected a fetal heartbeat—her baby was still alive—and her life was not in danger.

Prudente kept insisting on an abortion, and was finally transferred by medical aircraft to Spain where she ended her child’s life. Then, backed by the international abortion movement, she sued the Maltese government for violating her rights and her doctors for refusing to perform the abortion. Their goal was to end the legal protection of the unborn in Malta.

Malta’s Constitutional Court has just rejected her lawsuit. The ruling against Prudente—and in favor of the doctors—is not merely the outcome of a single lawsuit. It is an important strategic victory for the European pro-life movement.

The Constitutional Court concluded that there was never an imminent risk to Prudente’s life and that the doctors had provided appropriate medical care. It likewise rejected her claim that Malta’s pro-life law had violated her fundamental rights. Most importantly, the Court affirmed that the European Convention on Human Rights does not contain a right to abortion.

The language used by Judge Miriam Hayman was forceful and clear. She indicated that Prudente, while going through a profoundly traumatic situation, had allowed herself to be used by abortion activists to advance a political agenda.

The ruling completely dismantles the international campaign that the abortion movement constructed around Prudente's case. They had loudly and repeatedly claimed that Malta's pro-life laws were endangering the lives of women, pointing to the Prudente case as evidence.

Some of the world's most influential media outlets, including the BBC and The New York Times, piled on, promoting the false narrative that Malta forced women to wait "until they were on the verge of death" before receiving abortion "care." The goal was to force the Maltese authorities to abandon their defense of unborn life.

The judges, however, after evaluating all the medical evidence, concluded that Prudente was never in imminent danger of death. Moreover, they asserted that she had received appropriate medical care throughout her hospitalization.

For years, Malta has been accused of putting women's lives at risk by its pro-life legislation. Yet the public health data shows the opposite: Malta has one of the lowest maternal mortality rates on the planet.

Malta proves that you can protect both the unborn child and the mother at one and the same time. One need not be sacrificed to save the other.

Within the European Union, Malta remains a bulwark against attempts to turn abortion into a "fundamental right." This is because any revision of the Charter of Fundamental Rights requires the unanimous agreement of the member states. As long as Malta stands strong for Life, abortion cannot be imposed as a binding human right throughout Europe.

Getty Images/Andrei Antipov

This is why Malta was the subject of a multiyear pressure campaign by both media, diplomatic, and judicial actors. The European elite were trying to break Malta's will to resist the continent-wide legalization of abortion. For the time being, their strategy has suffered yet another failure.

Poland, too, continues to resist the culture of death. President Karol Nawrocki has just vetoed the civil partnership bill promoted by Donald Tusk's government, arguing that the Polish Constitution expressly protects marriage as the union between one man and one woman.

Since Tusk's governing coalition lacks the votes necessary to override the presidential veto, the initiative has, at least for the moment, been blocked.

Both Malta and Poland demonstrate that, within Europe, there are still those who are willing to resist the ideological colonization coming both from Brussels—the headquarters of the EU—and also from international organizations like the UN and IPPF.

The hostility of European elites toward Life and Family seems irrational when viewed against the terrible demographic winter that now has the continent in its grip. Birth rates are far below replacement level and the population is aging rapidly.

Migrants are pouring in from Africa and Asia—allowed in by the same elites who promote abortion—on the grounds that these new immigrants are necessary to sustain Europe's labor market and welfare systems. Maybe if Europe's political elites didn't zealously promote the deliberate elimination of human lives before birth they wouldn't need to import replacements?

Malta demonstrates that the defense of Life can still prevail against extraordinarily powerful international media campaigns, if the courts judge according to the facts and not according to headlines. Malta also confirms that the European pro-life movement has at least one stronghold capable of stopping, at least for now, an agenda that disguises the tragedy of abortion as a universal right.

Even on the deeply secularized continent of Europe, the battle for Life is far from over.

Ultrasound Machine Revitalizes Catholic Mission Hospital

BY SAMANTHA LEJEUNE

The ultrasound machines you have helped place in Catholic mission hospitals are quietly saving lives every day.

Recently, PRI received another update from Mother Amadea Mission Hospital in Kenya, and it served as a reminder of the difference a single piece of medical equipment can make in a place where resources are few and access to care is limited.

The hospital wrote to share how much has changed in recent years. Once a modest mission hospital, Mother Amadea has become one of the most trusted places for maternal and neonatal care in the area. In 2025 alone, the hospital conducted more than 1,650 deliveries, becoming the preferred hospital for childbirth for many women in the region.

For expectant mothers, especially those living in poverty or in surrounding slum communities, access to skilled maternal care is often uncertain. Complications that might be caught quickly elsewhere can become life-threatening when diagnostic tools are unavailable or hospitals are far away. Too often, doctors have had to make difficult decisions based only on symptoms and physical examinations, without being able to see what is happening inside the womb.

That has changed.

Since receiving an ultrasound machine through PRI's Family Care

Centers Project, Mother Amadea Mission Hospital has experienced a remarkable improvement in obstetric and maternal care. Ultrasound imaging has allowed clinicians to diagnose complications earlier, monitor pregnancies more carefully and respond more quickly when something is wrong.

Doctors can now identify dangerous conditions before they become emergencies. A mother experiencing internal bleeding can be diagnosed before shock sets in. A pregnancy complication can be recognized early enough to prepare for a safe delivery. A baby in distress can be closely monitored instead of discovered too late.

But the impact of an ultrasound machine goes further than diagnosing complications. For PRI, placing this equipment in mission hospitals like Mother Amadea is also, first and foremost, about protecting babies from abortion. When a mother facing an unexpected or difficult pregnancy and considering abortion is able to see her child on the screen — to watch a heartbeat flutter or tiny fingers move — that image often changes everything.

Ultrasounds give an unborn child a face, and for many mothers considering abortion, that first glimpse and recognition of the tiny human inside them is what moves them to choose life instead. Every machine PRI supporters help place in a hospital like this one is, in that sense, doing double duty: saving mothers from medical emergencies and saving babies from abortion.

This hospital has seen success even beyond medical charts and delivery rooms. As word has spread, more women have begun seeking care earlier in pregnancy and choose to deliver at the hospital knowing help will be there if complications arise. Families are traveling farther for treatment because they trust the care they will receive from a hospital guided by Christian values with a “deep commitment to holistic care, dignity, and service to the community.”

The hospital itself has grown as a result. This year, Mother Amadea Mission Hospital was recognized as the best private hospital in Mombasa County and ranked among the country’s leaders in medical best practices. For a Catholic mission hospital committed to serving vulnerable communities, the recognition reflects years of faithful work caring for mothers, babies, children and the elderly with dignity and compassion.

Earlier this year, the hospital informed PRI that the original ultrasound machine, having provided thousands of scans, had broken from overuse. The need for a replacement was immediate. Pregnant mothers were still arriving everyday. Babies still needed monitoring. Doctors still needed answers.

Thanks to PRI supporters, a new ultrasound machine has now been sent to Mother Amadea Mission Hospital while the original machine has been brought back for repair.

The hospital described the gift as a major milestone for its clinicians and the families they serve. Better and faster care for mothers and babies is now possible because the tools to provide it remain in doctors’ hands. Sometimes it is easy to think of medical equipment as just another expense or another line item. But in places like Mombasa County in Kenya, one ultrasound machine can change the course of an entire pregnancy. It allows faithful doctors and nurses to continue doing what they are already striving to do every day: protect mothers and care for babies.

Thank you for helping make that possible.

“May God bless the Population Research Institute abundantly for standing with Mother Amadea Mission Hospital in advancing compassionate and accessible healthcare for all.”

Including the Unborn.

From the Countries

LIECHTENSTEIN Liechtenstein Prince Vows to Block Abortion

Liechtenstein's Hereditary Prince Alois has vowed to veto efforts to legalize abortion through the first 12 weeks of pregnancy. Abortion is currently permitted only in cases of sexual assault or in rare cases where the mother's health is in jeopardy. A citizen initiative is gathering signatures for a referendum to expand abortion access, but Prince Alois, who holds constitutional veto power, announced that he would block the measure if approved.¹

CHILE Chile Debates 'Heartbeat' Bill

Chile's National Congress is considering legislation that would require women seeking abortions to be offered the opportunity to hear their unborn child's heartbeat before an abortion. The measure would strengthen informed consent and give mothers an opportunity to connect with their baby. Since Chile legalized abortion under limited circumstances in 2017, 6,249 women have sought abortions, with 85% choosing to terminate their pregnancies.²

IRELAND Ireland's Abortions Continue Rising

Ireland recorded 10,600 abortions in 2025, a 59.02% increase from 6,666 in 2019, the first-year abortion on demand became legal. The latest figures bring the total number of abortions since legalization to nearly 60,000. Pro-life advocates note that roughly one in six pregnancies in Ireland now end in abortion and warn the nation continues moving further from the protections that existed before the 2018 referendum.³

MEXICO Archdiocese Demands Dignity for Aborted Babies

The Primatial Archdiocese of Mexico is urging authorities to ensure miscarried, aborted, and unclaimed deceased babies receive a proper burial rather than being abandoned in hospitals, public places, or even the trash. The archdiocese called for legal mechanisms and designated burial sites, stressing that every human body deserves respect and dignity regardless of how brief a child's life was or the circumstances of death.⁴

AUSTRALIA Australia Revives Born-Alive Protections

Federal MP Llew O'Brien has introduced the Human Rights (Children Born Alive Protection) Bill 2026, which would ensure babies born alive following abortions receive the same medical care and legal protections as any other newborn. The renewed push follows the case of Baby Samuel, who was reportedly born alive at 16 weeks following an abortion in Queensland and lived for approximately 30 minutes before dying.⁵

ITALY Italy's Birthrate Hits Post-War Low

Italy recorded just 355,000 births in 2025, the lowest annual total since the end of World War II and a 3.9% decline from the previous year. The nation's fertility rate fell to 1.14 children per woman, while 63% of respondents in a recent study cited "economic, professional or social obstacles" as reasons for not having more children. Immigration was the primary factor keeping Italy's population stable at 58.94 million.⁶

¹ <https://thecatholicherald.com/article/liechtenstein-prince-vows-to-block-any-move-to-legalise-abortion>

² <https://www.gaudiumpress.ca/chilean-lawmakers-debate-bill-requiring-women-to-be-offered-opportunity-to-hear-fetal-heartbeat-before-abortion/>

³ <https://righttolife.org.uk/news/ireland-almost-60000-abortions-since-2019-a-59-increase-since-law-introduced>

⁴ <https://www.ewtnnews.com/world/americas/mexico-archdiocese-abandoned-or-aborted-babies-must-be-buried-treated-with-dignity>

⁵ <https://dailydeclaration.org.au/2026/08/20/obrien-born-alive-bill/>

⁶ <https://www.yahoo.com/news/world/articles/italys-birth-rate-hits-post-123338424.html>

PRI IN THE MEDIA

ICN Digital

PRI Report Sparks Action

After reading PRI's report on DKT International, the Honduran Pro-Life Committee launched its own investigation into online abortion pill sales. The findings were featured on national television after reporters, posing as a pregnant woman seeking an abortion, were able to purchase abortion-pill kits within minutes. The investigation sparked widespread media attention and was followed by Honduras' National Congress.

Viewership: 10.3 Thousand*

<https://icndigital.com/aborto-honduras-codigo-penal-mercado-clandestino/>

The Epoch Times

CCP Influence Reaches U.S. Catholics

Mr. Mosher recently wrote for The Epoch Times, covering the growing Chinese Communist Party influence over the U.S.–China Catholic Association. He highlighted the removal of religious freedom scholar Fenggang Yang from a USCCA conference after Chinese officials objected to his participation. This incident reflects the CCP's United Front strategy of silencing critics abroad.

Viewership: 16.9 Million

<https://www.theepochtimes.com/opinion/the-us-china-catholic-association-forms-a-united-front-with-china-6074313>

Huckabee Post

Mosher Challenges Fauci's COVID Legacy

Mr. Mosher was featured in the Huckabee Post, which discussed Dr. Anthony Fauci's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. Referring to his article "Fauci Pleads the Fifth," the piece highlights his argument that Fauci first downplayed the threat COVID-19 posed to the United States before later backing sweeping lockdowns based on deeply flawed epidemiological models..

Viewership: 14.6 Thousand*

<https://huckabeepost.substack.com/p/sen-cruz-fauci-deserves-to-go-to>

PJ Media

China Intensifies Christian Persecution

This week, Mr. Mosher was featured in a piece published by PJ Media examining the Chinese Communist Party's escalating persecution of underground Churches. He has warned that Xi Jinping's regime is intensifying its crackdown on Catholics who refuse to submit to state control, citing the detention and disappearance of underground priests and government censorship of sermons.

Viewership: 4.1 Million*

<https://pjmedia.com/catherinesalgado/2026/07/15/chinese-communists-step-up-persecution-of-underground-church-priests-n4955088>

Relevant Radio

Overpopulation Myth Debunked Once Again

Mr. Mosher appeared on Relevant Radio to debunk the myth of overpopulation. He explained how generations were taught the overpopulation narrative, despite it being "total nonsense." He also noted that the world's population is expected to peak within the next two decades before entering a long-term decline—a trend already underway in China and much of Europe.

Viewership: 236.5 Thousand*

<https://relevantradio.com/2026/07/overpopulation-myth-beauty-in-film/>

LifeSiteNews

China's Sinicization Exposed

Mr. Mosher was featured in a LifeSiteNews article examining the Chinese Communist Party's policy of "Sinicization" and its influence over the Catholic Church. He argued that the policy is not about preserving Chinese culture but about forcing Catholics to conform to Marxist ideology. He went on to say that the Sino-Vatican agreement has made it easier for the CCP to exert control over the Church in China.

Viewership: 1.3 Million

<https://www.lifesitenews.com/news/exclusive-professor-says-chinese-communist-officials-ordered-his-removal-from-catholic-conference/>

total monthly website visitors on each organization's website*